Dear Jose Juan Sanchez:

I am pleased to welcome you as an associate of the American Bar Association. I'm sure that the American Bar Association will soon become an essential component of your professional life.

As you will discover, the ABA can help your day-to-day needs through cutting-edge continuing education programs, specialty books and periodicals, opportunities to network with other legal professionals throughout the United States, and advice on the most up-to-date technology for the office and home.

In virtually every field, our Sections, Divisions, and Forums have numerous publications, courses, and programs that our members find valuable. Indeed, our most enthusiastic members are those who join Sections and make the most of our programs.

Other practical benefits of membership include specially negotiated discount programs on products and services such as: computers, copiers, credit card processing, online services, office supplies, overnight delivery, and much more. ABA members saved millions last year by taking advantage of these programs.

As legal professionals, we are all part of a justice system that provides the basis for the fundamental freedoms of American society. Your support of the ABA also ensures continuation of programs that promote values that are important to everyone: quality legal services, equal access to justice, better understanding of the law, and improvements in our justice system.

The ABA has made a tremendous, positive difference in my professional life. I hope it will in yours.

With best wishes.

Sincerely yours,

Michael A. Bedke
Chair, ABA Standing Committee on Membership
